Welcome to DC

Thanks very much for joining us here in Washington, DC. We are pleased to welcome our AAEA members, new and veteran, to this beautiful city. We have a great program planned for you, with sessions addressing topics of interest for everyone and plenty of opportunities to reconnect with old friends and make new professional contacts.

Looking through the program for the first time after picking up my registration materials is something I enjoy every year. As always, when you start to page through this year’s program you’ll find a full slate of concurrent sessions filled with organized symposia and invited and selected paper sessions. You’ll also find plenary sessions each day that address topics covering a wide range of issues. I’ll highlight several parts of the program that you might overlook.

Sunday is a day for networking and for getting involved. Most of our Section and committee meetings take place throughout the day, and a few sections have receptions in the late afternoon. We also have our third annual Early Career Professionals Networking Reception and the new employer showcase taking place in the afternoon. In the evening, the welcome reception will follow Sendhil Mullainathan’s Keynote Address.

The format for posters has changed slightly from recent years. One set of 100 posters will be on display during the welcome reception through Monday in the exhibit hall. A second set of 100 posters will be on display in the exhibit hall on Tuesday. Please take some time to visit the posters during your down time.

The Awards and Fellows Recognition Ceremony is always a highlight of the meeting. Its format will be similar to that in past years; however, this year the new Fellows have prepared brief acceptance speeches. The 2013 Fellows are: Bruce Babcock, Jeffrey Dorfman, Scott Irwin and Keijiro Otsuka. The AAEA Fellow Award is the highest honor bestowed by our association, so please congratulate them when you see them at other events or program sessions. We will also be chartering two new AAEA Trust funds: the Uma Lele Special Purpose Fund and the Jon Brandt Special Purpose Fund.

Again this year, breakfast on Monday and Tuesday and lunch on Tuesday will be available for all registrants. During the lunch on Tuesday, we have a special panel discussion that will be moderated by Susan Offutt titled “Grappling with Federal and State Budget Challenges”. The panel features Bill Hoagland from the Center for Bipartisan Policy, Andy Morton from the House Budget Committee, and Barry Anderson from the National Governors Association.

The aforementioned panel discussion is the capstone of a Beltway Track that I’ve created to highlight our presence in DC. You will find the Beltway Track listed later in the program along with the other Section Tracks. The Track includes a session highlighting new NIFA initiatives and a session featuring Mark Doms and Clayton Yeutter who will be discussing economic policies and priorities. I’d like to specifically thank Sonny Ramaswamy, Rob King, Susan Offutt, and Sally Thompson for helping to organize these special sessions.

I want to thank the many volunteers who organized sessions, reviewed selected presentation abstracts, planned pre- and post-conference workshops, organized student activities and competitions, and served on committees to select award winners and Fellows. Their efforts are critical to the success of this meeting.

I hope that your experience the next few days will be both professionally enriching and personally enjoyable. I also hope that you’ll carry a sense of enthusiasm and renewal home with you from this great summer gathering of agricultural and applied economists.

Richard J. Sexton
AAEA President
Welcome to Washington and the Joint Annual Meeting of AAEA and CAES! This is an exciting year to attend the meetings, and not just because of the locale. Building on past joint meetings, we have moved forward to offer fully integrated selected paper and poster sessions. This means CAES and AAEA members will be presenting alongside each other in the selected paper and poster sessions. In addition to this, CAES will have standalone Track Sessions related to a number of interesting and relevant issues. CAES is also trying something new by offering three Track Sessions styled after TED talks; these sessions will include talks by leading and emerging thinkers in the fields of food, agricultural and resource economics.

The CAES Executive has developed a number of initiatives to enhance our member services and to help move the Society forward. As such, I would encourage you to attend the Society’s business meeting and let us know your thoughts on these issues. I would also encourage you to attend the CAES Fellows Address, given this year by Fellow Richard Gray on “Funding Systems for Agricultural Research” and the CAES Presidential Address by our incoming President, J.P. Gervais on “Growing Complexity and Greater Sophistication in Agriculture”.

Washington DC is a region brimming with attractions, so be sure to take the time to enjoy what Washington has to offer. But don’t forget to attend the CAES Awards Banquet! The Banquet will be a place to meet and greet old and new friends. It will also be the time when we recognize members’ achievements, including the Undergraduate Book Prizes, Masters Thesis awards, and other awards in recognition of long standing contributions to the profession. So be sure to come along and help us honor our their success. Like past joint meetings, this year’s Annual Meeting offers a great way to renew old friendships, network and think more about pressing and relevant issues. I look forward to seeing you in Washington!

USDA-Foreign Agricultural Service

The USDA Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS) links U.S. agriculture to the world to enhance export opportunities and global food security. FAS’s core functions are carried out by a cadre of highly professional staff stationed in Washington, DC, and in 95 overseas field offices in 75 countries. FAS expands and maintains access to foreign markets for U.S. agricultural products by removing trade barriers and enforcing U.S. rights under existing trade agreements. FAS also partners with 75 cooperator groups representing a cross-section of the U.S. food and agricultural industry and manages a toolkit of market development programs to help U.S. exporters develop and maintain markets for hundreds of products. FAS analysts provide objective intelligence on foreign market opportunities, prepare production forecasts, assess export marketing opportunities, and track changes in policies affecting U.S. agricultural exports and imports. FAS also leads USDA’s efforts to help developing countries improve their agricultural systems and build their trade capacity.

AAEA Presidential Address
Monday, 8:30 am–9:30 am
Marriott Wardman Park, Lobby Level, Salon 2

Julie Caswell
University of Massachusetts Amherst
“Certifying the Quality of Applied Economics”

Julie Caswell's work focuses on understanding the operation of domestic and international food systems, analyzing how well they work, and evaluating how government policy affects their operation and performance. Her particular interest is in the economics of food quality, especially the quality attributes of safety and nutrition. How are markets for food safety and nutrition developing given increased consumer demand for safer, more nutritious products; manufacturers and retailers' efforts to meet this demand; and increased regulatory activity by national governments to assure food quality? She is also interested in the economics of certification, traceability, and labeling for quality attributes. Examples of her work include how to prioritize the importance of different foodborne risks, whether regulatory programs such as Hazard Analysis at Critical Control Points (HACCP) will enhance food safety at a reasonable cost, how benefit and risk information can be balanced and effectively communicated to consumers, and how international trade agreements influence food quality.

AAEA Fellows Address
