President's Column The AAEA Culture of Engagement

The leading benefit we all look to AAEA for is to participate in the AAEA Culture of Engagement. Through engaging with AAEA, we receive timely and insightful feedback on our work, learn about cutting edge work by others, and network with colleagues and friends, old and new. Building on our AAEA Culture of Engagement is a top priority for us. The AAEA Board is excited to introduce three initiatives below that build on our culture.

Networking Sunday—This Year it is July 27 in Minneapolis!

Networking Sunday recognizes the growing role of our Sunday program as a networking venue. Plan to arrive in Minneapolis by Saturday, July 26 in order to take full advantage of Networking Sunday! Many of you may want to arrive earlier to participate in pre-conference and mentoring workshops on Saturday. Networking Sunday is packed with:

- Section Business Meetings—allow you to meet other AAEA members with similar interests (see <http://www.aaea.org/membership/sections>) and help shape plans for the Section for the upcoming year.
- Committee Meetings—AAEA members meet face-to-face to work on and shape important issues facing the AAEA.
- Setting Up your Poster for the Sunday Evening Poster Reception
- Early Career Professional Networking Reception
- Section Receptions

- First Rounds of Academic Bowl
- First Rounds of Graduate Student Case Study Competition
- First Rounds of the Graduate Student Extension Competition
- Time to Meet with Colleagues to Plan Work

All this leads into the Keynote Address at 6:00 p.m. followed by our Poster Reception and the Opening Reception. Please build Networking Sunday into your meeting plans and encourage your colleagues and students to do so, too!

Selected Papers Culture of Engagement

Obtaining great feedback on on-going work is what Selected Paper sessions are all about. At Minneapolis, we will have 108 Selected Paper sessions, with over 400 papers presented! To continue to build our culture of engagement, we will be asking all participants and attendees of these sessions to be very actively engaged in the conversation that takes place in each session. We want to encourage interaction and discussion in all our sessions rather than only presentation.

To facilitate this process, we will ask all session moderators to follow a set format that allows 15 minutes per paper, with five minutes of Q&A following each paper. We ask session moderators to have questions ready for each presenter, to seed and/or augment the discussion of each paper. We also ask each presenter to have read and be ready to comment on the papers of the other presenters. With an active audience, the structure of these sessions is ideal for meeting other people working in our areas, starting conversations, and meeting new collaborators.

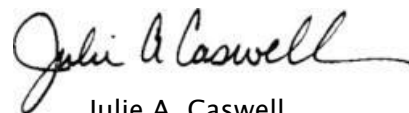

Lightning Talk Sessions

In Minneapolis we will pilot Lightning Talk Sessions as part of the Selected Papers lineup. These sessions will feature 8 short presentations of 8 minutes each—a great opportunity to present the key ideas of your work and meet others working in your area.

The Exchange—Starting Bi-Weekly Publication in February

The AAEA Board has decided to begin bi-weekly publication of The Exchange, replacing our current bi-monthly schedule. This will allow us to get news out to you faster in a concise format and to easily locate items you want to know more about. Features such as the President's Column and the People Section will continue to be published on an approximately bi-monthly schedule. We are working on the publication schedule and I welcome your input (caswell@resecon.umass.edu).

Altmetrics – the Buzz about Your Published Works
AgEcon Search

Citation counts, impact factors and other metrics calculated from the number of times a paper is cited are well established tools among academic researchers. Altmetrics is a developing idea that is not meant to replace citation-related measures but may supplement them with information that tries to address the societal impact of the work.

Altmetrics may more accurately be called social media metrics although some tools include news sources and other more traditional data. It has grown out of an interest in measuring the impact of research, both in the academic community and society in general. Here are a few resources that are currently being used by those interested in altmetrics:

Altmetric

Add the bookmarklet to your browser and when you are looking at an article online, click it and you will see a display of how many times it has been mentioned in blogs, Twitter, news sources, Facebook, and other online tools.

ImpactStory

ImpactStory allows individuals to set up a profile which lists publications, software, data sets, and other research products and to see whether they are discussed, cited, or saved by others, and to what extent.

Public Library of Science \(PLOS\) article-level metrics

For articles in PLOS, a combination of traditional citation information as well as downloads, blog posts, downloads into Mendeley, and other social media appearances.

This is a very new concept and it is not yet clear if or how it will be accepted in the academic community. However, it has caught the interest of some publishers and institutions, so it is worth keeping in mind.

Call for Nominations: 2014 AAEA Awards

The AAEA Awards Program recognizes excellence in the work of agricultural and applied economists. The Awards Committee, chaired by Jeffrey Dorfman of the University of Georgia, welcomes nominations for all award categories. Specific details on the criteria used to judge each award, as well as instructions on how to submit nominations for the award are available below.

The selection process for each award is administered by a subcommittee. The chairperson of each subcommittee receives all nominations and administers the review process. The chairperson will eliminate any conflicts of interest with members of the subcommittee during the evaluation process.

The deadline for nominations is February 3, 2014. All nomination materials shall be submitted via e-mail as a PDF file to the AAEA Business Office: info@aaea.org.

Restrictions

Except for the Publication of Enduring Quality Award, only one AAEA award can be received for essentially the same work. It is the nominator's responsibility to assure that no AAEA award (other than Master's Thesis or PhD Dissertation award) has already been received for the nominated work. Should a nomination be selected for more than one award in the same year (e.g. Journal Article and Research Discovery), the awardee(s) will be permitted to choose which award is received.

No member of the executive board—elected, appointed, or ex-officio—is eligible to participate as a principal recipient in competition for awards. The exclusion does not preclude participation if (s)he is a junior participant with respect to other(s) for whom exclusion from participation clearly would be a handicap.

Individual Award Criteria

The criteria for each award can be found on the AAEA website.

The award categories are:

- Distinguished Extension/Outreach Program Award
- Distinguished Teaching Award
- Outstanding Master's Thesis
- Outstanding Doctoral Dissertation
- Quality of Research Discovery
- Quality of Communications
- Publication of Enduring Quality
- Bruce Gardner Memorial Prize for Applied Policy Analysis

Update from the AJAE EditorsNew Process for AAEA Invited Papers

With the Invited Papers from the summer 2013 AAEA & CAES Joint Annual Meeting in Washington, DC, AAEA, in coordination with the American Journal of Agricultural Economics (AJAE), have implemented a new procedure that provides expedited peer review of all Invited Papers seeking to be published in the AJAE. In order to be published in the journal, Invited Papers must meet the high scholarly standards expected of published AJAE papers. If the manuscript is received on time and the authors request expedited review, the reviewers will be asked to assess the potential publish ability of the manuscript as is or following a limited set of revisions that are feasible within a short window of time. In order to meet the tight deadlines involved, we require promptness on the part of authors at all stages of the process. Invited papers that are accepted for publication will not carry the traditional disclaimer in the leading footnote informing the reader that the manuscript was not subjected to the normal peer review process.

To guide the review process, we instruct reviewers as follows: "Invited Papers must meet the high scholarly standards expected of published AJAE papers but they may also be broader thought-pieces, case studies and synthesis of literature that advance understanding and share emerging knowledge on topics in agricultural and applied economics likely to define future research agendas. Methodological originality is less important than potential impact on the profession. Nevertheless, papers should be substantively sound, and up-to-date, both methodologically and in policy terms. Invited papers are subject to the usual peer review process of the journal, and it is not guaranteed that all papers in an Invited Session will be published. Papers submitted for review should be close to their publish-ready state because there will not be time for multiple versions and reviews."

From the 2013 summer meetings, 17 of the 21 Invited Papers submitted manuscripts for consideration under the new process. Decisions and revisions took place over the past several months. Manuscripts that are accepted will appear in the March 2014 issue of the AJAE.

C-FARE Update

Happy New Year from the Council on Food, Agricultural and Resource Economics!

NIFA Releases Request for Applications for AFRI Foundational Program

On December 23, 2013, the United States of Department of Agriculture's (USDA) National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) released the request for applications (RFA) for the Agriculture and Food Research Initiative (AFRI) Foundational Program. In fiscal year 2014, NIFA plans to award approximately $82 million to support the AFRI Foundational Program. All AFRI program information, including the RFAs, is available online. Visit www.nifa.usda.gov/afri for more information. The AFRI Foundational Program addresses six priority areas to continue building a foundation of knowledge in fundamental and applied food and agricultural sciences that are critical for solving current and future societal challenges. The fiscal year 2014 RFA will feature two new programs intended to address critical and emerging issues.

- The Exploratory Research Program (ERP) addresses new challenges in food security, climate change, environmental quality and natural resources, nutrition, obesity, food safety, strong families and vibrant communities, and thriving youth. The program seeks to find innovative ideas that will position U.S. agriculture at the global forefront. ERP grants will be funded up to $100,000 for one year.

- The Critical Agriculture Research and Extension (CARE) Program seeks to address critical problems that continue to impede the efficient production and protection of plants and animals. Funded projects will quickly yield solutions or practices that can be rapidly implemented by producers. CARE will fund projects up to $150,000 for three years.

AFRI will make awards in four challenge areas: food safety, food security, childhood obesity prevention, and a new challenge area, water for agriculture. The AFRI challenge areas will continue to support societal challenge areas where research, education, and Extension can achieve significant and measurable outcomes. The NIFA Fellowships Grants program will also be offered again to provide opportunities for training and workforce development through pre and postdoctoral fellowships in the agricultural sciences.

AFRI is NIFA's flagship competitive grants program and was established under the 2008 Farm Bill. NIFA anticipates the amount available for AFRI Program in fiscal year 2014 will be approximately $275 million. This amount is based on the temporary appropriations, which provide funds through January 15, 2014. Adjustments will be made to program allocations once the fiscal year 2014 appropriations are finalized. Reported by C-FARE. Source: USDA

Obituary

Alan R. Bird

On December 29, 2013, at home in Alexandria, of Parkinson's disease. Dr. Alan Bird, an economist, had six degrees, including a PhD in Economics from Michigan State University, and over 100 publications, including a book, "Surplus...The Riddle of American Agriculture." A past president of the Society of Government Economists, he worked at seven colleges and universities, including graduate faculty member at Michigan State University and University of Massachusetts. He was the top economist in the Office of Regional Planning, USDC, and was Deputy Director for USDA Economic Research Service. His government service spanned 32 years.

He also taught in Fairfax County schools, and was Adjunct Professor of Economics at NVCC for 35 years, winning Faculty of the Year 2006–2007. Born July 20, 1926, in Brisbane, Australia, where he earned a Bachelor of Science (Honours) in Economics from University of Queensland, he emigrated to England, graduating from University of Nottingham with a Master of Science in Economics. Awarded a Fulbright Scholarship, he emigrated to the U.S., earned a PhD at MSU, and became a U.S. Citizen. Dr. Bird is survived by his wife of 55 years, Carolyn, daughter Susan of Alexandria, son William of Charlottesville, son Robert of San Diego, CA, and four granddaughters. He was predeceased by son Richard. A memorial service, followed by a reception, will be held on January 11, 2014, at 11 a.m. at Peace Lutheran Church, 6362 Lincolnia Rd., Alexandria, VA. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Parkinson's Disease Foundation, 1359 Broadway, Suite 1509, New York, NY 10018,
